HISTORY OF THE LOG HOUSE

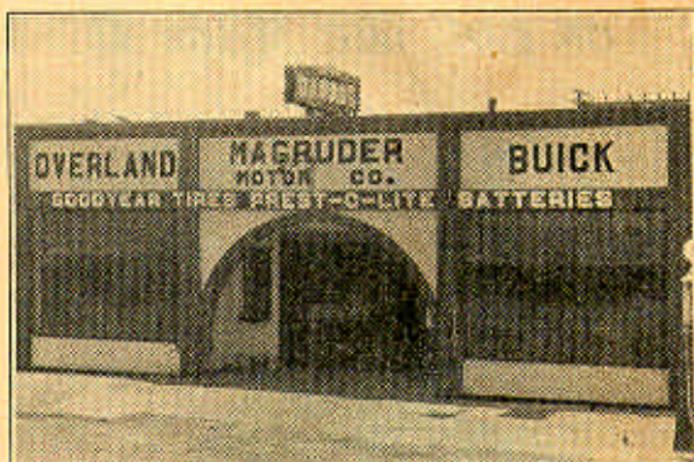

The most unique real-estate and insurance office in America and one of the most historical landmarks of Glasgow, Montana is the old log house that is the home of the LOG HOUSE INSURANCE AGENCY. It was one of the first houses erected in the town before the Great Northern Railway was extended into Montana. It has sheltered many men prominent in the social and political as well as the business development of northern Montana. Here J. J. Hill was entertained while on an advance trip into the West. Buffalo Bill (Wm. Cody) lodged here while in this section of the state. On one of his visits in 1884 he killed a buffalo near the present site of Glasgow. Its head was carefully preserved by one of the old timers and is mounted on the front of this old log house. All of the weddings, parties and social functions of early pioneer days centered at this Log House when Glasgow was an infant cow town. If these walls of logs could speak they would unfold a wonderful tale of growth and development. For sentimental reasons we are making it our home and will greet you here with the same warmth extended a decade ago to an occasional visitor.

with the coming of the Great Northern railway, and was named by the late James J. Hill, and is the largest city within a radius of 100 miles. The elevation at this point is 2038 feet. It is situated on the main line of the Great Northern railway about half way between Spokane and St. Paul. The Theodore Roosevelt Highway passes through Glasgow. Tourists routing their trips over this highway will find excellent hotel and garage service at this point. The Chamber of Commerce maintains a free highway information bureau, and free camping ground will be found here. Miles City can be reached from Glasgow via gasoline ferry at Lismas—a distance of 22 miles—and then by auto overland to Jordan, on to Miles City. A good road traverses the entire route. Glasgow has excellent schools, churches of seven denominations, beautiful homes, good business town. There are three newspapers and many fine mercantile establishments.

A recently completed tourists camp is one of the best in the state. Situated under natural shade trees, on the banks of the Milk river. It has a frame kitchen with all conveniences for cooking, city water and electric lights, wood and a shower bath—absolutely free to tourists.

Phillips County

A county of fifty-four hundred square miles with Valley county on the east, Blaine county on the west, the Missouri river on the south and Canada on the north.

The northern part of the county is devoted almost entirely to dryland farming. In the center or along the Milk River Valley from east to west, are thousands of acres of rich irrigated farms, watered by the U. S. R. S. The southern part is devoted mainly to stock raising. Located in the east and center is the big Bowdoin oil dome on which two wells are in progress of drilling and this season will see considerable activity in oil development.

The Little Rocky mountains in the southwest corner of the county, is the first chance the tourist from the east has of spending a day in the mountains, enjoying the scenery and spending a day of relaxation after a long trip. Apart from the beauty, several gold mines are located in the hills.

The towns of the county from east to west are: Saco, Bowdoin, Malta and Dodson. Malta being the county seat. From all these cities maintained roads branch out to the towns across the line into Canada on the north, and to the Yellowstone Park, Mosby Oil Dome and the cities in the southern part of the State.

SACO—181

Population 500.—Windsor and Central hotels. Two garages, camping site in park in town, telephone and telegraph. Some fishing in Bowdoin reservoir; duck, prairie chickens and grouse in season. Information may be had from the Chamber of Commerce.

Blaine County

General Description—Blaine county lies in the northern part of Montana, about midway across the state, east and west. The Canadian line is its northern boundary and the Missouri river its southern. Physically and industrially, the county is divided into two sections. The plains or agricultural section lies north of township 30 and is wholly devoted to grain growing and farming and comprises about two-thirds the total area of the county. The mountainous or stock raising section occupies the southern part of the county. The Milk River valley, which crosses the county east and west, is included in the Milk River project of the reclamation service, and when developed is destined to be one of the best agricultural districts in the state. The Fort Belknap Indian reservation occupies the southwestern part of the county. Date of creation, February 29, 1912; land area, 4,219 square miles; county seat, Chinook; altitude county seat, 2,407; growing season, 118-127 days; population, 1920, 9,057; population county seat, 1920, 1,217.

HARLEM—256

Population 800. Free camp site two blocks out. Three garages, one fire proof. To the south of Harlem lie the beautiful Little Rocky mountains which are noted for their natural rugged scenery that is not surpassed anywhere. This is a very popular outing place in the summer time and all during the summer months is fairly infested with people from the nearby towns and from distant cities who go there to spend a week or so camping out and living next to nature. Good roads lead from Harlem to this popular outing place.

Harlem is the gateway to the Fort Belknap Indian reservation. About 13,000 acres of land tributary to Harlem are under irrigation in the valley which is noted for its famous blue joint hay and alfalfa. This section has furnished considerable feed for the drouth stricken sections of the state the past three years.

LOHMAN—287

At the mouth of Clear Creek, the largest creek flowing out of the Bearpaw mountains. This town boasts of an excellent supply of pure wholesome drinking water and also offers good camping grounds to the tourist, with excellent fishing at the Belknap dam, less than a mile from the town.

Hill County

General Description—Hill county lies in the center of the northern tier of counties with its northern boundary line defining the Canadian boundary. Hill county is practically square, about sixty miles in length and width, though the southeastern corner is irregular in shape, where it extends into the Bearpaw Mountains. This southeastern section is the location of the Rocky Boy Indian Agency. The state maintains the Northern Montana Agricultural Experiment Station at Fort Assiniboine, near the county seat. Date of creation, February 28, 1912; land area, 2,844 square miles; county seat, Havre; altitude county seat, 2,480 feet; growing season, 101-126 days; population county, 1920, 13,958; population County seat, 1920, 5,429.

HAVRE—303

Population 6000. The county seat of Hill county, located on the banks of the Milk River and at the foot of the Bear Paw mountains. It has a good substantial business and wholesale section, and a beautiful residence district. It is a general division point of the Great Northern Railway, while its accompanying machine shops, round-houses and car repair shops, and the large pay roll is one of the assets of the city. There are several natural gas wells, and coal mines lie adjacent to the city.

The Bear Paws and their foot hills afford wonderful ranch lands where large numbers of sheep and cattle are raised. Havre is also in the heart of a rich agricultural section which yields good crops of wheat, barley, oats and flax. The forage crops consist principally of fodder corn, alfalfa and native grass. Garden truck, potatoes and all root crops do exceedingly well in this soil.

The numerous trout streams in the Bear Paws afford the fisherman and the pleasure seeker opportunity for recreation, and the many lakes abound with fowl for goose and duck hunting.

There are many opportunities in our city for business enterprises, such as ice plants, pottery works (we have both the clay and sand), sash and door factory, cold storage plant, etc. It is an ideal distributing point for wholesale houses with the main line of the Great Northern east and west, and the Montana Central to the south.

The Secretary of the Havre Development Association at the City Hall, or the Secretary of the Havre Highline Unit of the Northern Montana Development Association at the Farmers State Bank, will be glad to furnish additional information.

The tourist will find good hotel accommodations, good camping grounds, and excellent water.
